Message from Rev'd Mpole Masemola

When the Gospel Sailed South:

The Story of Reverend Richard Johnson

On Monday of last week (3 February), the Anglican Church of Australia commemorated the Reverend Richard Johnson: a 35-year-old priest who, armed with his Bible, his Book of Common Prayer, and an unshakable conviction that the Gospel must be preached even at the world's edge, set sail for Botany Bay. There are easier job postings, one imagines. Yet, as the First Fleet departed on 13 May 1787, Johnson and his wife Mary tucked themselves aboard the Golden Grove, baptising their voyage with courage, faith, and probably a fair measure of seasickness.

Richard Johnson was born in the quiet village of Welton, Yorkshire, in 1755—a place unlikely ever to imagine itself connected to kangaroos or convicts. He studied in Hull under Joseph Milner, a fiery evangelical who also taught a certain William Wilberforce—yes, that Wilberforce, the future abolitionist. It was Wilberforce who later recommended Johnson for the unenviable post of Chaplain to a colony founded largely on convicts, soldiers, and desperation.

At Magdalene College, Cambridge, Johnson absorbed the vibrant evangelical scholarship of his day and emerged as one of those rare souls convinced that the Gospel was not a quaint Sunday affair, but the very business of living. By 1783 he was ordained deacon, and by 1784, priest.

Then came the strange divine call to New South Wales—a land as distant as one could flee without falling off the map. Johnson hesitated, and who could blame him? But after visiting the prison hulk at Woolwich, gazing intently into the faces of men and women bound for exile, he saw not criminals but souls. In that moment, the chaplaincy ceased to be an appointment and became a mission.

Before departing, Johnson married Mary Burton, a devout young woman who shared his convictions and, fortunately, his willingness to live without London's comforts. Their wedding, conducted by the Reverend Henry Foster, must have carried both joy and a hint of foreboding. In Australia, Johnson quickly adopted a policy of friendship toward Aboriginal peoples, even giving his daughter—born in 1790—an Aboriginal name, Milbah.

By all accounts, Johnson's years in New South Wales were not easy. His sermons often outlasted the patience of soldiers; his congregation of convicts was rarely attentive; his church, at first, was nothing more than the open air. Yet, with a resilience that can only be described as grace under duress, he preached, taught, comforted, built, and planted—both crops and faith. By modern standards, he was overworked, underappreciated, and consistently misunderstood. Yet through twelve exhausting years he devoted himself to the conviction that the Gospel did not stop where the map ended. At the farthest corner of the known world, he lived as if his small post were the centre of God's attention—and perhaps it was.

What, then, might we—less than a couple of decades shy of a quarter of a millennium later—learn from the Reverend Richard Johnson? First, he reminds us that the Church's calling is not ease but

Generous Love of Christ

'For you know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sake he became poor, so that you through his poverty may become rich' 2 Corinthians 8:9

Generosity and grace go hand in hand. The truly generous person gives in abundance beyond any obligation. And generosity does not have to be in money. The generous person forgives when they are sinned against. Why should Christians be generous? Because of the supreme act of generosity to us, when Jesus left the untold glory of heaven to enter this world 'to seek and to save the lost' It is the supreme act of generosity.

Question for thought: Do I understand who Jesus is and what he has done?

God Almighty, we are greatly encouraged to see how vibrant Mothers Union is in Tanzania. We pray for the Diocese of Morogoro and pray that members will be strengthened in their faith and trust in you. Give them wisdom in facing challenges of poverty and unemployment. We thank you for the support they give to those struggling. In Jesus' name, Amen.

endurance; not applause, but faithfulness. Second, he teaches that planting seeds of grace sometimes means never seeing the harvest. The traces of Johnson's wattle chapel may be long gone, but in its place stands a national Church. And third, his life testifies that faith, when joined to action, can endure even the harshest conditions—whether of climate or congregation.

As we remember him, perhaps the invitation is simple: to go once more into our corners of the world—parish halls, schools, nursing homes, and coffee shops—and speak good news with the same stubborn hope as that lone clergyman under the gum trees.
